Armstrong wins stage & makes miracle comeback

2003 Tour de France "still not over" says sportsman Ullrich move... It was a sensational climb by Lance."

Not too far from Lourdes, a city known for religious miracles, at the top of an ancient, fog-shrouded peak in the Pyrenees, American Lance Armstrong made a miraculous comeback from a sudden, unexpected collision with a spectator with 9km to go to win Stage 15 and solidify his tenuous grip on the Maillot Jaune at the centenary Tour de France.

Today's mystery was whether four-time Tour de France winner Lance Armstrong could hold off the onslaught of Jan Ullrich. Despite the crash, Armstrong showed that he's got what's inside to win his fifth consecutive Tour. "This has been a Tour of too many problems; too many close calls, too many near misses," he said after his win. "I just wish it would stop and I could have some uneventful days." But as the American has struggled this year at the Tour de France, his ride to Paris has been anything but uneventful.

Armstrong said, "I just wish the problems would stop. Many of the problems I haven't discussed, but there have been a lot of strange Make way for "le patron" Photo: © Jeff Tse/Cyclingnews things that happened this Tour de France that I need to stop having. Some of them were evident like the stage to Gap; other things were not talked about. It's been a very odd, crisis-filled Tour. But it was a good day today

Armstrong's USPS team director Johan Bruyneel has been playing excellent poker during the last two stages, but Stage 15 was the moment when the Lance-Jan showdown had to happen. "Today, Lance absolutely had to attack," Bruyneel said. "He had a lot of problems today with the crash and when Mayo attacked he made his Bruyneel was emphatic in his evaluation of the centenary Tour, saying, "With all the suspense, I think that this is the best Tour in the last 20 years.

After some tense moments on Stage 15 when Ullrich distanced Armstrong on the penultimate climb, the Col du Tourmalet, there was a major regrouping at the base of the ascent to Luz Ardiden. Lance's US Postal Service-Berry Floor teammates Manuel 'Triki' Beltran and Chechu Rubiera were back as part of a 30-strong group that hit the base of the 13km climb together. Beltran upped the tempo as the slope steepened, and suddenly Armstrong made his move on Ullrich with 9km to go to the summit.

As Armstrong gapped Ullrich slightly with Iban Mayo (Euskaltel-Euskadi) on his wheel, a spectator caught the Maillot Jaune's right handlebar and he went head over heels. Mayo went over the top of Armstrong, while the fast-closing Ullrich veered left to avoid the Tour de France director Jean-Marie Leblanc said, "There was a spectator who just wouldn't move alongside the road as Armstrong was passing by. He knocked Armstrong down and that took down Iban Mayo who was behind him. Ullrich had to swerve to avoid the crash and it seemed that a musette caught Armstrong. But we can't put barriers everywhere ...

Bruyneel's reaction was, "When Lance crashed, I thought it was over."

USPS-Berry Floor team owner Thom Weisel told Cyclingnews, "It was awesome today; it's going to go down as one of the epic stages of all time. When Lance crashed, we had no idea what happened and we were concerned... It was a harrowing experience. But Chris [USPS mechanic Chris Van Roosbroek] gave him a great shove!"

Van Roosbroek told Cyclingnews, "We saw on TV he crashed and I tried to get out of the car, but with all the spectators, it was very hard to get out. Once I reached Lance, I just pushed him as hard as I could. He was having trouble getting his foot in the pedals and almost crashed later on."

Up the road, Jan Ullrich was not attacking Lance when he was down. "It was correct that when Armstrong crashed, I didn't attack, because cycling is a fair-play sport," said Ullrich after the stage. Tyler Hamilton (CSC) agreed. "After Lance crashed, the other guys kept on after the stage. Typer hammon (CSC) agreed, after targe datafted, the other gaps and gaps and gaps and gaps and the stage of the stage responsibility to go up front and tell them to slow down and wait a few seconds

Ullrich and Hamilton's sporting gestures will go down as a great moment in Tour de France history, as echoed by Johan Bruyneel, who said, "the fact that Ullrich waited for (Lance) was amazing. It was the attitude of a true champion."

Armstrong was aware that Ullrich didn't attack when he crashed, saying "the fact of the matter is that I did the same two years ago on the descent of the Col de Peyresourde. I was with a few guys and said 'look, we can't race until we know [Ullrich] is okay, if he's back in the race.' What goes around comes around, so I'm very grateful to Jan for remembering my gesture two years ago. Perhaps that's why he did that today. The tables were turned two years ago and I think that what I did two years ago was the correct thing and what Jan did today was the correct thing."

Fuelled by adrenalin and with fire in his eyes, Lance got back to the front group after his topsy-turvy progress and he attacked again. Mayo tried to follow again but Lance had finally found something extra on the cool, foggy climb through thousands of screaming fans. Armstrong explained his tactics and state of mind on Luz-Ardiden, saying, "Sometimes the best way for me to ride is angry, but I wasn't angry today when I attacked. I was a little bit desperate because I knew I needed to make the race today to put time into Jan before the final time trial."

Earlier in the day, as Armstrong and Ullrich were midway up the historic climb of the Tourmalet in the closest Tour de France ever, Ullrich made a powerful surge that Armstrong didn't follow. "Jan made a very strong attack on the Tourmalet but I felt like it was not the time to do that. Tourmalet is a long climb and a long descent... So for me, tactically, it was not the time (for Ullrich) to go."

Armstrong powered past early attacker Sylvain Chavanel (Brioches La Boulangère) in the final few kilometres to take Stage 15, his 16th stage win in the Tour de France. Armstrong was clearly happy to the win, but today wasn't his sweetest win.

"In terms of emotion, my stage win in Limoges in 1995 was my biggest win," said Armstrong. "You can always judge the emotion by the last 100 meters and perhaps I was too tired today to savor my win. But there's no comparison to the rush I had in 1995."

Stage 16 Pau-Bayonne

Wednesday, July 23 / 197.5km

From Pau to Bayonne, where the bayonet was invented and home of the tasty "jambon de Bayonne" ham, Stage 16 offers the last significant climbing in the 100th anniversary Tour de France. This stage traverses the eastern Pyrenees, through the Basque region of France, and includes the nasty ascent of the Bagarguy, followed by Burdincurutcheta. These are the last two chances to attack in the mountains, since it's pretty much all downhill to Bayonne on the Atlantic coast. Thirty-one years ago, Dutchman Duyndam took the win, while local resident David Millar may be looking for a home win if he can rally from the illness which has hampered his ride through the mountains.

Stage 16 Climbs:

km 67.5: Col du Soudet (14.1km @ 7.5%) km 98: Col du Larrau (2.4km @ 10.5%) km 110: Col de Bagarguy (8.8km @ 9.2%) Km 118.5: Col de Burdincurutcheta (2.2km @ 6.2%)

How it unfolded

Cool, overcast conditions greeted the peloton in Bagnères-de-Bigorre for the start of the stage, staying that way until the finish atop Luz-Ardiden. The flag dropped and the attacks started, with Santiago Botero (Telekom) and Sylvain Chavanel (Brioches la Boulangère) eventually getting clear on the Cat. 4 Côte de Meilhas (km 31). The pair built up a 9'30 lead on the peloton on the Col d'Aspin (km 94), with Ag2r's Iñigo Chaurreau riding some minutes behind them, only to be caught on the Tourmalet. Botero and Chavanel kept their lead until the following climb of the Col du Tourmalet (km 124 km), when Chavanel went solo.

Valiant effort Photo: © CN The action on the Tourmalet came in the peloton when Jan Ullrich accelerated with 8 km to go to the top, putting Armstrong in a little difficulty, but the Maillot Jaune clawed his way back, along with Zubeldla and Mayo. Alexandre Vinokourov wasn't so good, crossing the top with the assistance of Botero, 1°15 down on the Maillot Jaune.

On the long descent into Luz-Saint-Sauveur there was a regrouping, and Vinokourov managed to regain the leaders by the foot of the final climb. Chavanel still had 5 minutes lead at this point, but inevitably lost time as the race intensified behind him. The attacks started and Armstrong, Mayo and Ullrich moved clear, until Armstrong caught a spectator's bag on his brake levers and crashed, bringing Mayo down with him. The group slowed to wait for the Maillot Jaune, although he was further (and painfully) hampered when his foot slipped out of his pedal.

Once back, Armstrong wasted no time and attacked with 7 km to go, distancing Ullrich, Zubeldia, Mayo, Hamilton, Basso and Moreau, with Vinokourov falling back again. Armstrong steadily put time into the Ullrich-led chase, and was over a minute in front when he caught Chavanel with 4 km to go. But Ullrich managed pulled back time in the final kilometres to limit the damage to 40 seconds at the finish. Armstrong won the stage from Mayo and Ullrich, with Zubeldia taking fourth.

Armstrong increased his lead to 1'07" over Jan Ullrich, but the 2003 Tour de France is far from over. Alex Vinokourov (Telekom) had an OK day today to finish 8th and maintain his 3rd place on GC, but Armstrong is now 2'45" ahead of the Kazakh rider. Tyler Hamilton (CSC) continues to cope incredibly well with his cracked collarbone. The cool mist of the Pyrenees may have reminded him of New Hampshire's Mt. Washington as Hamilton had a good day on Stage 15, finishing 7th. Tyler is also sitting in 7th on GC and may have a chance to move up further if he has a good time trial next Saturday.

Jan Ullrich may be down by a minute and change, but he's not out of the picture. Ullrich is still Armstrong's main rival for the 2003 Tour de France title. "Today was a really hard race and I'm very happy about the way it turned out. I fought hard, but today Lance was stronger... Congratulations to him. I'm only sorry that didn't get 2nd place for the time bonus. Lance tried to win the Tour today but it's not over yet."
